SHARE PRICE PERFORMANCE:COMPANY DESCRIPTION:

Egalet is a specialty pharma company focused on developing abuse-deterrent formulated drugs, including opioids. Egalet is utilizing the FDA's 505(b)(2) pathway with the intent of shortening development timelines and cost.

All amounts in US$ unless otherwise noted.

Life Sciences -- Specialty PharmaceuticalsPOSITIVE FDA FEEDBACK ON TECHNOLOGY; DATA-RICH 2015*Investment highlights*FDA modifies category 3 study for EGLT-001, displaying resistance of EGLT's technology

FDA required more modifications in the design of category 3 studies of EGLT-001, attributing it to the fact that the agency has not seen any other technology to date displaying this much resistance to all chemical and physical challenges. We believe this is very favorable for the company in establishing a durable abuse-deterrent formulation and high rate of trial success.

EGLT-001 plans for Phase 3 trial by 1Q15 despite FDA talks

Despite ongoing FDA dialogue on recent bioequivalence data with 15, 60, and 100 mg EGLT-001 (no definitive response yet), the company is currently planning on initiating a phase 3 trial by 1Q15 and NDA filing by mid-2016. The company states the trial will cost ~$10-12M, with ~15-month completion time.

Targiniq approval without post-marketing studies, positive

The recent approval of Purdue's long-acting Targiniq by the FDA without post-marketing studies – displaying the shift in FDA's sentiment of abuse-deterrent opioids in the market – is in our view a positive for EGLT as the company moves into its category 3 abuse deterrent studies 4Q14 with EGLT-002. FDA's recent meeting on these formulations highlights the necessity of drugs that are less susceptible to abuse, which may hasten approval process for EGLT's compounds.

Major competitor removed, expect data vs. Purdue by mid-2015

We remind investors that the recent withdrawal of Remoxy by Pfizer significantly reduces competitive risk for EGLT-002. Additionally, given positive FDA feedback to the durability of EGLT-001, we believe EGLT-002 has a high chance of showing superior abuse deterrence vs. Purdue's Oxycontin OP with data expected mid-2015.

Investment risks

Risks to our rating and price target include the following:

- Approval for Egalet-001 and Egalet-002 may be delayed or may never occur at all: If the FDA does not allow Egalet to pursue approval for Egalet-001 through the Section 505(b)(2) pathway via bioequivalence to MS-Contin, the company may be forced to conduct Phase III studies resulting in increased costs, delayed revenue generation, and more competition.
- Total revenues, even with timely approvals, may be lower than our estimates: Egalet-001 and Egalet-002 face competition from currently marketed non-abuse-deterrent products, while the planned reintroduction of Embeda, another abuse-deterrent long-acting morphine drug (Pfizer) may have a negative impact on the market opportunity for Egalet-001. Also, legislation to remove non-abuse-deterrent opioid drugs from the market may never materialize, resulting in investor concern
- Future litigation may delay or reduce total revenues. Several competitors currently in the space may undertake legal strategies to delay the launch of Egalet-001 and Egalet-002. These competitors have significantly greater resources at their disposal than Egalet and have more experience maneuvering the legal field.
- From a financial standpoint, although Egalet currently has adequate cash on hand ~$65, the company may require additional capital before the anticipated launch of Egalet-001 in the second half of 2015. An additional capital raise could pressure shares.
